Resources for talking with your children:

<https://www.embracerace.org> – Embrace Race was founded in early 2016 by two parents (one Black, the other multiracial Black/White) who set out to create the community and gather the resources they needed (need!) to meet the challenges they face raising children in a world where race matters.

Living With the Bear – Constant exposure to violence via social media is certainly harming our students, and we can learn to recognize the signs to give them the support they need.

The Children's Community School Social Justice Resources – Do you want to talk to your young child about issues of social justice, but don't know how? You're not alone—most adults find topics like race, gender, and class difficult to talk about with children. But if we don't find ways to talk about it, children will learn whatever they glean from unspoken messages, and that doesn't often work out very well.

Interview with Howard Stevenson – Howard Stevenson is a clinical psychologist at Penn GSE, studies racial literacy and racial trauma. He works with educators and families to help them understand the emotions that racial incidents can bring about, and how to reduce their negative effects on health and wellbeing.
