

Getting-to-Know-You Bingo

“Get To Know You Bingo” is probably the most popular of all the icebreakers out there. It works for almost all ages, and it can be a lot of fun.

You’ll need to create a bingo sheet or use the one available for download. If you would like to make your own, just make a 5 x 5 grid of personal statements such as “has long brown hair,” “has more than four siblings,” “has traveled to Canada,” and so on..

Give the bingo sheets out to your students, with a pencil, and then send them off to find the person that meets the criteria in each box. Players can only use their classmates once on their sheet.

The game is over when someone collects a name for the entire grid OR after everyone has completed their grid you can begin reading out the names of your students—they would need to cross off a name when it is called. If they get five in a row, they win!

Download my Get to Know You Bingo Game now!

Customize the bingo cards by creating your own descriptions and characteristics. For ideas, google “human characteristics” and “Personal statements.” You can also customize descriptives for different ages and grade levels